

Photos on the Website

Photo 1: The picture was taken at the Würzburg Jewish Cemetery and shows several rows of gravestones, most of them identical, rather small and made of concrete. They look plain and stick out of the green grass.

Photo 2: The picture shows the oldest gravestone in the cemetery. It is about 60 cm high, of ochre colour and has a Hebrew inscription. Below is written in German "Oldest gravestone of this cemetery, Amalie Bechhöfer 1881" (The date should be corrected to 1882)".

Photo 7: This picture is a painting. The signature in the upper right corner reads Eva 7 years, Käte 5 years, painted in Cincinnati in March 1939. It shows two girls in the same light blue dress. Both girls are sitting, the older girl more in the foreground holding the other around her waist, while the younger has her arm around her sister's neck. The expression of the painting is calm and the girls' faces reveal contentment.

Photo 10: The picture shows a photograph of the Holocaust Monument in the Jewish Cemetery in Würzburg. The Monument is 4 metres high, in the shape of gravestone with the typical Hebrew engraving at the bottom. In the centre, it bears an inscription honouring the Jewish victims of the Shoah that came from Würzburg and Lower Franconia.
